Rethinking data center design: AI's acceleration demands new strategies for power, cooling and location
BY SEBASTIAN DOOLEY, PAUL LEWIS, CASEY MILLER AND BEN WOBSCHELL
For decades, artificial intelligence has been – at least according to popular media – poised to take over the world. And yet, it is only recently that AI has begun to infuse daily life. It's still not taking over the world. But it is affecting how data centers are designed and operated.]
